

The diagram shows a t-shirt template with three main areas defined by colored lines: a green outer border for the bleed area, a magenta line for the final size, and a blue line for the guide area. A sticky note is pinned to the right side of the template. Arrows point from the text labels to their respective areas on the left side of the template.

Bleed Area: This is where any backgrounds need to extend to.

Final Size: This is the final size of the product.

Guide Area: This is where any images or text needs to be contained within.
